Occupational Outlook 2011

ANTICIPATED ECONOMIC INCREASE FOR 2011!

Despite a pickup in hiring and growing stability in the housing market, it will take San Diego County at least another four years to struggle back to pre-recessionary levels, according to a panel of economists and business leaders at the annual San Diego County Economic Roundtable.

Compared to the past seven years, the outlook for 2011 is relatively bright, with accelerating job growth, a stabilizing housing market and a growing Tech Sector. The panelists agreed that job growth locally, (netgain, 10,000 to 15,000 jobs) would surpass the amount of jobs for 2010 at 6,300.

Predictions revealed that the local unemployment rate - now at 10.3% - could dip to 9 percent range by the end of this year. However, by pre-recession standards, late 1990's, 40,000 jobs were available to job seekers each year. Job growth will remain painfully slow in 2011.
