Politics Instead of Justice?

It is a terribly sick society that complacently allows political expediency to be substituted for justice and mercy. This is quite obviously what has transpired during this latest altercation with the Governing Board. What should have been handled as any other infraction of rules has resulted in the resignation of 4 (and possibly 5) of the finest teachers this school will ever see, 4 by force and possibly 1 by choice. I believe that this is not the end of it, and we may possibly see the resignation of more faculty. What can the Board expect? They have created an atmosphere at this college that is not only not conducive to good education, but completely stifles it.

The offense clearly seems to be not the actual act of breaking a rule but the horrible sin of getting caught. This is very obvious to anyone who is at all aware of what goes on behind the scenes here at this wonderfully moral institution.

I believe that if the Board would contribute more time trying to upgrade educational facilities at this college and less time trying to defeat education, this might someday be a place that I would send my children and recommend to others. At the moment my conscience would not allow me to do so.
