James K. Bell, College of San Mateo English instructor, has signed a contract with a New York publisher for a college English textbook, "Metamorphosis: A Search for Success." The book will be published in the Fall of next year by David McKay.

Bell is also working on a novel, still untitled, on the behavior and life of a mass killer and a number of critical articles for "Contemporary Poets", St. James Press, London, scheduled for publication early in 1974.

A member of the CSM faculty since 1963, he is listed in "Men of Distinction -- 1973", "Who's Who in the West" and "Dictionary of International Biography."

Bell received his bachelor's degree from the University of California at Santa Barbara and his master's degree from UC Berkeley. He taught at Grossmont College 1961-62.
