(7) The English Proficiency Exam

Many students transfer from Grossmont College to San Diego State University to fulfill their goal of earning a bachelors degree. However, these transfer students are often unprepared for the WPA—a critical reading and writing exam—that determines how many additional writing classes they will have to take at the university before they can graduate. The consequences of a low score on this exam are enormous for our students: more time required to complete their degree, more money needed to pay for college.

Learn what you can do in your courses, particularly those that do not traditionally involve large writing assignments, to help our transfer students learn to read and write more analytically and thoughtfully. Imagine the quality of work you could receive from your students right now if they could only read and write more effectively! Come and participate in this interactive workshop designed to help you help your students succeed at Grossmont College and beyond

Location. Griffin Gate

Presenter(s). Carl Fielden

■ G E N E R A L T R A C K

(8) Maximizing Your Money

This workshop will cover the retirement benefits offered at college (STRS, PERS, and the 403 b), and the tax savings by doing so. In addition, this session will cover personal taxes with a quick line by line review with an emphasis on deducting unreimbursed employee expenses. Handouts and tips will be provided in addition to a 2 page 1040 tax return and the 1 page schedule A (itemized deduction) for a hands-on workshop. The session will end with a question and answer portion.

SENATE TRACK

(9) What to do with the 6th Grade Reader? ▲

The purpose of our workshop is to inform Grossmont faculty, staff, and administrators of the skill strengths and weaknesses of the approximate 70% of students assessing on our placement test below a college reading level (12th grade).

We will examine the writings of students in English 90, 98, and 110, share the reading levels of students at those course levels, discuss what skills are taught and practiced in the reading and writing courses, and share strategies for working with students exhibiting these skill needs in your classrooms.

(11) Finding Joy in the Midst of Grief, Loss, and Change

In this presentation, Karl and Lisa will share with colleagues insights they have independently gained through their own personal experiences with loss. In addition, helpful works by various authors will be discussed so that everyone will have a variety of helpful reading options. Also, colleagues who attend will receive handouts of the presentation as well as supplemental materials to help everyone not only to survive loss, but hopefully to formulate creative and energizing ways to live and grow in the midst of grief, loss, and change. Since loss is something we all experience, we hope that many faculty and staff will attend this stimulating and encouraging professional development work shop.
